

Canada should be a world leader

Thank you for the excellent and provocative article featuring King's Hans Martin on the realities of climate change ("Concerted efforts vital to combating climate change," by Mark Pavilons, Aug. 15).

The current Government of Canada is not providing leadership on this issue. As Dr. Martin points out, we have "quietly withdrawn" from involvement with the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change.

Canada can and should be providing world leadership in dealing with climate change and the problems for the future which it entails. The prophetic voices of scientists like Hans Martin need to be both heard and heeded.

Thank you for this timely article.
