

Gasoline spill on Keele Street

King Township staff were busy last week, cleaning up gasoline that made its way into the storm water system near Keele Street and Clearview Heights in King City.

Joining local crews in the cleanup were York Region and the Environment and Climate Change (MOECC).

The level of gasoline fumes was deemed not harmful by King Township's Fire and Emergency Services. King's drinking water system has not been affected.

While overall responsibility is with the MOECC and York Region, King Township supported their activities and assisted affected residents.
